We have Mr. Evans now settled down in Anglesea, after the storm brought about by J. E. Jones, with his own mind and heart improved and enlarged. We shall have to glance at his work of faith and labour of love, during the remainder of his residence in the island. These branch themselves into several particular kinds of agency, and embrace the collecting of churches; the building of houses of worship; the administration of discipline, under peculiarly difficult and trying circumstances; the providing for the payments of-interest upon debts, and of debts themselves; the defence of the distinctive principles of the denomination, as well as of-those of what he conceived to be the evangelical system; together with the whole conduct of intercourse and communication with the churches of South Wales. This account we shall take principally from his own papers, beginning with a covenant with God, which he made in great humility, and with much fear, soon after the deliverance, recorded in our last chapter, and which took place between Dolgellau and Machynlleth. 1. I give my body and my soul to thee, O Jesus, the true God, and the life everlasting, to deliver me from sin and from death eternal. Amen. C. E. 2. I call the day, the sun, the earth, the woods, the rocks, my bed, my board, my book-room, as witnesses that I come unto thee, Saviour of sinners, to have rest to my soul from the...
