JUVENILE INSTRUCTOR, VOL. 36 (CLASSIC REPRINT)

Forgotten Books, United States, 2015. Paperback. Book Condition: New. 229 x 152 mm. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from Juvenile Instructor, Vol. 36 Doubtless many would be interested to learn how this great transformation of watery wastes into fields and places of habitation was brought about. It is said that some generations ago the people whom we now call Hollanders found themselves very much in need of more land upon which to build homes for their fast increasing population. They were too honest and conscientious to wage war upon their fellow-men that they might gain this much needed expansion of their borders, so they determined upon a more honorable conquest, that of subduing and driving out vast areas of water that intruded within their confines. As soon as the water receded, sometimes owing to the outgoing tide, but oftener as a result of the diligent and unceasing labors of the people, dams and dikes were constructed to prevent its return. At times the great sea, as though angered by the thought that it could be conquered by puny human hands, would dash with all its fury against the walls of rock and earth that sought to stay its might, and breaking through, would submerge whole fields and villages and destroy many lives. But the people were not easily discouraged, and at each seeming failure of their labors they built their walls higher and stronger, and in time became almost complete masters of their once fierce and powerful foe. Today in many parts of Holland there is a perfect net-work of dams and dikes running in every direction. These not only afford a means of protection from the waters of the sea, but many of them are paved with brick or stone, and serve as...
